STOPS 1 & 2

01

10:00 - 10:50

MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY

Dinosaurs, minerals and the iron-and-glass main court make a striking start. This first visit concentrates on the central displays rather than every case. The adjoining Pitt Rivers Museum follows, giving the morning two very different settings without a walk across town.

Free, unticketed entry. Start on Parks Road at 10:00. Leave ten minutes after the visit for the adjoining museum entrance and a short break.

02

11:00 - 11:50

PITT RIVERS MUSEUM

Musical instruments, textiles and objects from many cultures fill the cases and galleries. Fifty minutes gives you time for a selection of displays, with the wider collection a reason to return. Visitor entry is through the Museum of Natural History.

This morning slot works Tuesday-Sunday. On ordinary Mondays Pitt Rivers opens at noon. Leave fifteen minutes afterwards to reach Broad Street.

STOPS 3 & 4

03

12:05 - 12:50

HISTORY OF SCIENCE MUSEUM

Einstein's blackboard brings a working scientific idea into the gallery: the equations survive from his 1931 Oxford lecture. Astrolabes, sundials and other instruments show different ways people have measured time and understood the world. The Old Ashmolean building is part of the story.

Free general admission, Tuesday-Sunday. Groups book ahead. The basement access lift is out of action and there are no public toilets. See the access details before visiting.

COFFEE & REGROUP

Broad Street makes a natural pause between the instruments and the Ashmolean's art collections. This half-hour is for finding a café and having a drink or light snack. There is time to sit down before the short walk to Beaumont Street.

12:50-13:20 is the café break. Then allow ten minutes to the Ashmolean on Beaumont Street. A full restaurant lunch needs a longer itinerary.

THE ASHMOLEAN MUSEUM

13:30 - 15:00

ASHMOLEAN

Finish with art and archaeology at the Ashmolean. Early England and European paintings make a rewarding pairing, while the museum's Spotlight Trail offers another focused introduction. Ninety minutes suits a selection of galleries. The bright central atrium links rooms across the redeveloped museum, with ancient worlds and Asian art offering further routes for a return visit.

GOOD TO KNOW

The permanent collection is free. Advance booking is recommended at busy times; major exhibitions have separate tickets. Lifts serve the public floors. Individual galleries and objects may be temporarily unavailable.
